NASSAU COUNTY MUSEUM OF ART / ARNOLD & JOAN SALTZMAN FINE ART BUILDING / NOVEMBER 2016

November 19, 2016 – March 5, 2017

From the Collection of the Kalamazoo Institute of the Arts, Kalamazoo, Michigan

Ansel Adams Sight and Feeling

Ansel Adams' ability to create photographs with a remarkable range and subtlety of tones is legendary. Yet for all his technical mastery, Adams recognized that what made a compelling photograph was far more elusive. This exhibition of Adams' photographs suggests how his intuitive and emotional response to the landscape resulted in powerful and enduring photographs.

Light Works 100 Years of Photos

This exhibition spans the history of photography from Eadweard Muybridge's 19th-century photographic studies of animal locomotion to Richard Misrach's contemporary chromogenic prints. Alfred Stieglitz, Edward Curtis, Ansel Adams, Dorothea Lange, Diane Arbus, Richard Avedon and many other celebrated photographers comprise this survey of photography processes and subjects from 1873 to 2000.

New Photos: Long Island Collects focuses on significant photographic works created from the 1960s through the present day. Historically, photography has been used as a documentary medium to tell a story. Using the malleable medium of the photograph, artists have often enhanced or staged their works to convey a story, create emotion, or otherwise touch the viewer in a significant manner. This exhibition presents a survey of photographic works from private collectors. Among the artists included in New Photos: Long Island Collects are John Baldessari, Matthew Barney, Robert Mapplethorpe, Vic Muniz, Cindy Sherman and William Wegman, among many others.

Become a Museum Volunteer

The Museum is interested in hearing from individuals who would like to join the Museum as a volunteer. Volunteers work in many capacities. They greet the public and assist shoppers in the Museum Store. Others assist staff with mailings and other office functions. No experience is needed but we ask that prospective volunteers share our enthusiasm for the Museum!

Members Mingle with Artists and Collectors at Opening of Feast for the Eyes and Ben Schonzeit: Abstract Figuration

Museum members reveled in the luscious images of our most recent exhibition, Feast for the Eyes, portrayals of food and dining reflecting a wide array of artistic movements and styles, from classic 19th-century still lifes to contemporary Pop Art and Photorealism. Members also saw two distinct sides of Ben Schonzeit's art: his photorealistic paintings in Feast for the Eyes and his sculpture and collages in the Contemporary Gallery exhibition, Ben Schonzeit: Abstract Figuration.

Members always see the exhibitions first. To find out how to receive invitations to these and other member-only events, call (516) 484-9338, ext. 23 or log onto nassaumuseum.org/membership.

St. James artist Christian White with two of his still life paintings selected for the exhibition.

Museum Board Executive Vice President Frank Castagna with Debbie Wells who assisted in the organization of Feast for the Eyes.

EVENTS

Sketching in the Galleries

Tuesdays, 1 – 2 p.m., Dec. 13, Jan. 17, Feb. 14

You don't have to be able to draw to enjoy this program! This is not about the final result but rather about taking time to look closely at works of art in our galleries to get a better understanding of how the artists created them. Led by Museum educators, this program will encourage visitors to slow down as they engage in a variety of drawing assignments that focus on the artists' use of line, proportion, texture and value. Paper, pencils will be provided (participants are welcome to bring their own sketchbooks). Sketching in the Galleries is limited to 10 people per session. Admission plus $5. Register at nassaumuseum.org/events.

Brown Bag Lectures

Docent Riva Ettus

Thursdays, 1 - 2 p.m., December 15, January 5, February 2

One of the Museum's most popular programs, three Brown Bag Lectures are offered with each new exhibition and are always specific to that exhibition. Visitors are encouraged to bring a sandwich and enjoy lunch with friends as Museum Docent Riva Ettus presents an informative talk on the artists and works on view in the galleries. Following the talk, plan to join the 2 p.m. public tour of the exhibition. The December, January and February talks will explore the works and artists in the current photography exhibitions: Ansel Adams: Sight and Feeling and Light Works: 100 Years of Photos, both drawn from the collection of the Kalamazoo Institute of the Arts, Kalamazoo, Michigan, as well as New Photos: Long Island Collects, a showing of photographs on loan from local art collectors. Brown Bag Lectures are free with Museum admission; so are the exhibition tours. Reservations not needed; first come, first seated for the lectures.

Concert: The River – ETHEL

Wednesday, February 1 at 3 p.m.

Inspired by the depictions of nature in the current exhibition of Ansel Adams' photography, we present the string quartet, ETHEL, performing several pieces from their current repertory, The River, as well as other works that focus on the wonders and beauty of nature.

ETHEL and Robert Mirabal, a Native American musician, instrument builder and three-time GRAMMY® Award winner, present a cross-cultural experience. The inspiration for the concert is water as the embodiment of spirit and its essential role in life on earth. The flow of music, narrative and ritual evokes timeless Native American traditions through music artistry. Free with Museum admission, reservations not needed.

Register for programs at nassaumuseum.org/events
Reservations may be made at nassaumuseum.org/events up to three days prior to an event.
All programs and events are subject to change and/or cancellation. Any fees paid for cancelled programs will be refunded

Grant from TFCU Enhances Museum's Professional Development Programs for Educators

A generous grant from Teachers Federal Credit Union (TFCU) means that K-12 classroom teachers will now have additional opportunities to learn strategies for using art to support learning. The Museum's new professional development three-part series, An Evening for Educators, presented by TFCU, began on October 19 with participants having a tour led by a Museum Educator of Feast for the Eyes and talk by artist Ben Schonzeit, who had a solo exhibition, Ben Schonzeit: Abstract Figuration, in the Contemporary Collectors Gallery as well as several of his photorealist works on view in Feast for the Eyes.

Robert G. Allen, CEO of TFCU; Nancy Fox, grantwriter; Monica Reischmann, director of development; Laura Lynch, director of education; Dr. Karl E. Willers, Museum director.

With each program of the series featuring a reception, An Evening for Educators is also affording teachers the opportunity to network and learn from each other. It is expected that the present series will involve hundreds of educators from more than 50 school districts. Speaking about this initiative, Museum Director Dr. Karl E. Willers said: "We greatly appreciate the generous support of Teachers Federal Credit Union in partnering with Nassau County Museum of Art to present An Evening for Educators series. Over the coming school year, we look forward to sharing networking, learning and professional development opportunities with teachers and administrators on Long Island. This partnership with Teachers Federal Credit Union makes such valuable educational initiatives possible." For information, call Education Director Laura Lynch at (516) 484-9338, ext. 24.

One of the nation's largest credit unions, TFCU was founded on Long Island in 1952. Its 25 branches throughout Long Island serve more than 260,000 members.

OUTDOORS AT NCMA

Each season reveals exciting new aspects of the Museum's grounds. Enjoy the trees, fields and trails as they settle into fall and winter.

Walking Trails

The Museum's 145-acre property includes many marked nature trails through the woods, perfect for family hikes or independent exploration.

Gardens

From Formal Gardens of historic importance to quiet little nooks for dreaming, the Museum's property features many lush examples of horticultural arts.

Sculpture Park

More than 30 works, many of them monumental in size, and by renowned artists, are situated to interact with nature on the Museum's magnificent acreage.

EDUCATION

Sketching in the Galleries

Guided by Museum educators, participants in our new Sketching in the Galleries program are learning to slow down, really look at art, and then interpret the art in their own unique way. Participants have remarked how relaxing it was to focus in on one work of art and how much detail they noticed when sketching. While looking at and sketching a selection of pieces in both the Feast for the Eyes and Ben Schonzeit: Abstract Figuration exhibitions, Laura Lynch, the director of education, shared relevant background information about the works.

Summer Art Lab

This August, young artists experimented and created during Summer Art Lab at the Museum. From paintings and sculptures inspired by Feast for the Eyes, to building circuits to power LED light sculptures and mixing natural dyes made from acorns found on the Museum's grounds, the artists discovered how art inspiration can come in many shapes and forms.

Families Get a Taste for Art!

Inspired by Feast for the Eyes, families really got a Taste for Art. In the galleries, with NYC Children's Theater, they transformed pizza boxes, built large food sculptures and wrote songs about giant donuts.

Partnering with Port Washington Schools

In a collaboration with Port Washington School District, the Museum is kicking off a new program, Drawn to Nature, that employs our vast natural resources. District wide, Port Washington's first grade students will participate in an exploratory journey throughout the Museum's trails, grasslands, forests, pond habitats, and cultivated gardens. Equipped with journals and magnifying glasses, students will have the chance to hone their inquiry and observational skills while immersed in a bucolic natural setting. Visiting the Museum over the course of fall and then spring will provide opportunities for students to observe, classify, compare and infer from the changing seasonal surroundings of our flora and fauna. Sketching combined with descriptive field notes will help students document what they observe. Back at in the classroom, students will work with art teachers and the Museum's teaching artists to create art inspired by their scientific research on the Museum grounds.

Have you ever hankered to go behind the scenes of the art world, visit an artist's studio, tour a notable private collection that's not open to the public? Museum supporters at our special membership levels, Museum Council and Contemporary Collectors Circle, regularly enjoy these very special experiences.

Treat yourself to lunch at our new Red Maple Market Café at the Museum. This is Red Maple Market's on-site café, featuring selections prepared daily at Red Maple's international food hall at 1085 Northern Boulevard in Roslyn. The Museum Café is open Saturday and Sundays, noon to 3 p.m. While the menu will be changing constantly, expect such fine selections as a turkey and brie on croissant and a cheese, nut and dried fruit platter. Red Maple Market is now one of the Museum's approved caterers; call (516) 801-8080 or visit the market to obtain a catering menu.
