

‘A TREASURE,
WONDERFUL GARDENS AND BEAUTIFUL HOUSE!’

As one of Britain's best stately homes, there are countless reasons to visit Mellerstain. Whether it's to view the stunning interiors of the house or enjoy the magnificent gardens, Mellerstain has something for everyone to enjoy.

Set amidst 100 acres of parkland and ancient woodland, this grand Georgian mansion remains almost as it was when Robert Adam designed it more than 240 years ago. One of Adam's finest works and one of Scotland's top architectural glories, the interior decoration is simply stunning, including the Library, considered to be one of Adam's masterpieces.

INSIDE AND OUT

STEP INSIDE.....
Marvel at the outstanding Robert Adam interiors and the perfectly proportioned rooms. Enjoy the paintings which adorn the walls by Van Dyck, Ruysdael, Gainsborough, Ramsay and other Old Masters, providing a fascinating history of Mellerstain and the Baillie family through the centuries. See marble busts by Roubiliac and exquisite collections of furniture, china, rugs, wallpapers and embroidery.

OUTSIDE.....
The view from the Italianate terraces over the lake to the Cheviot Hills is enchanting.
The house is located within 100 acres of mature parkland and whether you want to enjoy a walk in the stunning formal gardens or picnic under an ancient tree, Mellerstain provides a magnificent backdrop and a serene location that has changed very little since the days of Robert Adam and Lady Grisell Baillie.

A favourite view for many visitors is from the South Lawn where you can see how well the beautiful building complements the exquisite, designed landscape. To the North Lawn amongst the sturdy oaks and majestic beeches you will find the enchanting little thatched Tea Cottage discreetly tucked away with its own enclosed parterre garden.
