EXPERIENCE

Though it's a short trip from the heart of Albuquerque to the heights of the aerial tramway, the distance can also be measured in the drama of an 11,000 square mile panoramic view. From the base to the top of 10,378 foot Sandia Peak, time and terrain seem to move in harmony as passengers lift from the desert floor, above canyons and lush forests, to the mountain top.

2.7 miles of sky-view travel and discovery of New Mexico's varied landscape and life zones.

A trip to Sandia Peak is a fun way to learn about wildlife, ecology and the natural environment. It offers many different types of flora and fauna to observe and learn from including mule deer, black bear, raccoons, bobcats and various species of squirrels.

Birds are also an important part of the mountain wildlife. Some of the more common birds to be spotted are golden eagles, hawks, jays, ravens and canyon wrens. The Four Seasons Visitor Center located at the upper terminal features information on the flora and fauna as well as the history of the Peak.

25 miles of slopes and trails for skiing, hiking and biking.

At an elevation of 10,378 feet, the Peak has an 11,000 square-mile panoramic view. The vistas and excitement never end!

SUMMER

At Sandia Peak Ski Area visitors and riders alike enjoy scenic summer chairlift rides up the peak. The 25 miles of mountain trails offer scenic adventures for hikers and bikers. The summer chairlift is open weekends and holidays, July 4th through Labor Day.
